

LAW ENFORCEMENT OVERWHELMINGLY SUPPORTS JUDGE PAULA MANDERFIELD FOR COURT OF APPEALS

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Lansing, MI; September 24, 2008

Law enforcement groups are lining up to support Circuit Court Judge Paula Manderfield in her race for a seat on the Michigan Court of Appeals. Judge Manderfield has been endorsed by the Fraternal Order of Police (FOP) - State Lodge Of Michigan; Police Officers Association of Michigan (POAM); Upper Peninsular Law Enforcement; and the Michigan Association of Police Organizations (MAPO) consisting of the: Police Officers Labor Council, Flint Police Officer's Association, Warren Police Officer's Association, Detroit Police Officers Association, Detroit Police Lieutenants and Sergeants Association, Michigan State Police Troopers Association, and the Michigan State Police Command Officers Association. In addition to these law enforcement groups, county sheriffs, police chiefs, and county prosecutors across the state are speaking up for Judge Manderfield.

Law enforcers know that a judge at the appellate court level must have the judicial experience of weighing all sides of an issue to reach the truth. Overwhelmingly, the law enforcement community says through their support that "Judicial Experience Matters." As a sitting circuit court judge and former district court judge, Judge Manderfield has worked to protect Michigan residents from criminals. Because nearly one-half of all cases before the Michigan Court of Appeals are criminal appeals, it is imperative that an appellate judge have criminal law experience. Judge Manderfield has 25 years of experience in criminal law, while her opponent has worked on mere handful of cases during his entire legal career. She gained national attention when she presided over the murder trial and sentencing of Ricky Holland's parents.

Michigan residents need a judge who has a proven track record of being tough on crime and who is experienced in deciding criminal cases. Circuit Court Judge Paula Manderfield vows to use her 16 years of judicial experience to keep Michigan families safe.
